

Zeusabella's Back to School List

When Mrs. Kempisty retired at the end of last school year, she passed along her classroom pet, a red-eared slider turtle named Zeusabella, to the 5th and 6th graders. A pet teaches students compassion and responsibility, and it builds a strong community among classmates. A pet also spurs on lots of incidental learning. For some students, checking on Zeus is the very first thing they do when entering the classroom, or the last thing they do each day when they leave.

We are asking for your help in obtaining all of the supplies she needs for the school year. If you are able to contribute financially towards her care and upkeep, we would greatly appreciate it.
